

Safety Dance

Juan's grandmother (abuela) learned about a new version of the Pata Pata song that was created by UNICEF to teach people about staying safe from the corona virus. Some people live in places with no internet and no newspapers. But people almost everywhere have radios. They can hear this song on the radio and learn important ways to stay safe and dance along.

Watch and Listen and Dance

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0xprciOSq4c>

People in the video were mostly dancing at home, to stay safe. But they still danced in different kinds of places in their homes and while they were doing different things. If you missed any, watch the video again!

Did you Notice?

crawling 	With a cricket bat 	In a kitchen
Outside 	with a dog 	Inside a house
on stairs 	with a broom 	Just hands
at a computer 	on a bed 	sitting
wearing a clown nose 	Washing hands 	with a violin
working in a garden 	with a cane 	on rocks

Safety Dance

To Think About

Why do you think that the main singer, Angelique Kidjo, decided to make a happy, dancing song to teach people about a serious subject? 📱

Act out a New Dance

If you were in the video, imagine what you would do while you were dancing.

- Would you do an activity, like brushing your teeth?
- Or dance in an interesting place, like on a trampoline?
- Would you hold something, like a couch cushion or hairbrush?

Juan decided he would dance with a box of cereal while he gets ready for a snack.

Don't spill it, Juan!

